

The Genuine Man.

No man is genuine, says Woodrow Wilson in the September Atlantic, who is forever trying to pattern his life after the lives of other people—unless, indeed, he be a genuine doit. But individuality is by no means the same as genuineness; for individuality may be associated with the most extreme and even ridiculous eccentricity, while genuineness we conceive to be always wholesome, balanced, and touched with dignity. It is a quality that goes with good sense and self respect. It is a sort of robust moral sanity, mixed with elements both moral and intellectual. It is found in natures too strong to be mere trimmers and conformists, too well poised and thoughtful to fling off into intemperate protest and revolt. Laughter is genuine which has in it neither the shrill, hysterical note of mere excitement nor the hard metallic twang of the cynic's sneer—which rings in the honest voice of gracious good humor, which is innocent and unsatirical. Speech is genuine which is without stiffness, affectation, or pretense. That character is genuine which seems built by nature rather than by convention, which is still of independence and of good courage. Nothing spurious, bastard, begotten out of true wedlock of the mind; nothing adulterated and seeming to be what it is not; nothing unreal can ever get place among the nobility of things genuine, natural, of pure stock and unmistakable lineage. It is a prerogative of every truly human being to come out from the low estate of those who are merely gregarious and of the herd and show his innate powers exalted and yet unspoiled—sound, unbroke, free from imitation; showing that individualization without extravagance, which is genuineness.

Literary Notes.

Jules Goran (Mrs. Van Benselar Cruger) has used for her last novel a study of New York, Newport and Boston life, which promises to be read with wide interest by all who are interested in American fashionable life. No one knows the society of these three centers of fashion better than Mrs. Cruger. From her girlhood up she has had every opportunity to observe, and we have had to American women of more brilliant powers, not only of reading the human heart, but of putting her impressions in delightful fashion.

A charmingly fresh Massachusetts girl is sacrificed in her youth to the ambition of a "rich mariage." Deprived of love, she throws herself into the race for social leadership, and we follow for twenty years, with ever-increasing interest, the career of this able and beautiful woman as she captures outpost after outpost, lining in Boston, trying to change her base of operations to "Braggadocio," and then attacking the main works of the enemy at New York, and so on to Newport, and finally bringing the capitulation of Boston itself. The first chapter opens in the September Cosmopolitan.

Owing to over-crowding and bad ventilation, the air of the schoolroom is often close and impure, and teachers and pupils frequently suffer from lung and throat troubles. To all such we would say, try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. For coughs, colds, weak lungs and bronchial troubles no other remedy can compare with it. Says A. L. Field, superintendent of schools, Union Depot, Ohio: "Having some knowledge of the efficacy of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, I have no hesitation in recommending it to all who suffer from coughs, lung troubles, etc." For sale at D. J. Brannen's drug store.
